Challenging effectively

Challenge is inevitable if helpers are going to facilitate positive change with families. Challenging effectively in partnership requires careful judgement about the timing, level and nature of challenge, the forms of support and guidance offered, and when to withdraw these without leaving parents feeling overwhelmed.

Working with parents

You could use this version when working with families as a way to frame a discussion about the relevant aspect of partnership. You could invite them to work with you to add on information that is relevant to them. These sheets can be used to map progress so far and plan where to go next, and can be used to keep the partnership focused on its purpose, keeping an end in sight.
